SSU suggests plan to Board of Regents

by Lauren Weis, staff writer

The University of Maryland Board of Regents passed a highly controversial plan on Dec. 16 which includes the elimination of five SSU majors: French, Spanish, medical technology, chemistry and sociology, as well as modification of the graduate nursing and teacher education programs.

Thomas Bellavance, SSU president said, "We are gearing up for the appeal process," which begins on March 1.

According to Bellavance the SSU appeal will provide the Board of Regents with an alternative package to what they suggested in their ad hoc report.

The priorities of this alternative package include: 1) Limit the amount of disruption to students; 2) Preserve the existing curriculum and mission; 3) Protect as many employees as possible; and 4) Retain as much autonomy as possible.

Bellavance has been meeting with groups and working on the alternative plan since the document was released. "All January we did nothing but work on this project," he said.

The board demands that SSU eliminate five majors. The alternative plan proposed by SSU attempts to package six other programs in lieu of the five programs the Board demands we cut.

All programs except for one differ from the original five. Bellavance would not reveal which program of the original five is included to be cut in the alternative plan. He said it would undermine the effort and divide the campus which needs to be united in order to pass the package.

In addition, SSU will propose a substantive reduction in the administrative structure. Plans are under consideration to join (Bellavance would not disclose which ones) as well as reassign all graduate programs to the school from which they originate.

For instance, the graduate program in English would come under the jurisdiction of the English department rather than the Graduate Studies program. This would eliminate the graduate studies and continuing education office.

SSU is also considering reducing the number of department chairpersons by combining a number of departments (Bellavance would not identify which ones).

Bellavance said that in addition to the program cuts, the Regents' plan includes the consolidation of services in admissions.

The plan suggests creating two or three centers for the (continued on page 5)

The deadline is fast approaching. SSU has until March 1 to prepare an alternate plan to satisfy the demand by the Board of Regents to cut $700,000 from the budget.

SSU faculty and staff have been working incessantly since Dec. 16 preparing appeals for both the Administration and the Board of Regents.

Time is running out for the French, Spanish, medical technology, chemistry, sociology, graduate nursing and education departments. All are threatened to be cut completely or modified according to the Board's plan. chemistry department, said that his department has done, "just about everything we can," to prepare for the appeals process.

SSU installs satellite system

by Michelle VanNess, staff writer

As many on-campus students have recently discovered, SSU has dropped Storer Cable and installed satellite dishes next to Caruthers Hall.

According to John Morris, director of telecommunications/ work experience, the new satellite system will be approximately half the price of what Storer was charging.

He said, "There is a $20,000 a year difference which will go into the housing budget."

The new system has not received a warm welcome because SSU is currently having difficulty getting certain networks on the air, such as FOX and NBC, according to Morris.

Tina Pistolakis, an SSU sophomore, says, "I don't like it. I can't figure out the channels and there is a lot of dead air. They should give us a channel schedule."

"We are having trouble picking up Baltimore and DC stations with the antenna even at 100 feet. UMES has theirs at 140 and it's not working either," said Morris.

According to Morris, Salisbury has several options to experiment with in order to receive some of the missing stations. The NBC network can be reached easily by a transfer from the Denver base, but the shows would air two hours late.

The second option for picking up NBC, and the one that is most likely to occur, is to put up another small dish that would receive from the Atlanta network.

The television shows would be viewed in the same time zone, however, all commercials and news would also be broadcast out of Atlanta.

SSU is able to receive the FOX network by satellite, but the system can only get the syndications, which means there is dead air in between FOX shows.

Morris explained, "The network broadcasts to local affiliates from satellite. They broadcast only the network shows and there are holes there to be filled by the local station."

Morris wants to stress to students that SSU is working hard to retrieve the stations that are lost. "They will be (continued on page 4)

Clinton's aid program will have a modest start by Janet Parenti, staff writer

President Clinton's national service program will begin as a more modest and economical effort than the original proposal promised in his campaign, according to a Feb. 4 White House report.

George Stephanopoulos, the White House communications director, said that Clinton "intends to fulfill his commitment to build a national service plan" but admitted that it would be an expensive promise to keep.

The national service program was originally intended to replace the existing federal loan program with one that would give college students tuition aid in exchange for community service after graduation.

Both Stephanopoulos and Eli J. Segal, director of the Office of National Service, said that the President has been forced to change some of his goals because economic circumstances has changed.

"The deficit is bigger. We

"In theory [Clinton's plan] sounds nice, but in reality it would be a nightmare to monitor."

-Beverly N. Horner, financial aid director

are going to have to make tough choices. Some of those choices might entail scaling back some of the investments that [Clinton] dearly wants to move forward on," Stephanopoulos said.

On Feb. 4 Clinton said that he always intended to enact the national service program in stages and that it would take six years for the full slate of options to be offered.

"Unless the mechanics are such that we can't implement the service program, which I don't believe is the case, I would expect us to get, you know, to be well beyond what loans in amounts related to post-graduate income.

This mechanism would ease the burden on students who take lower-paying jobs after graduation.

Currently, it does not matter whether a student goes into a low paying job or a high paying one—he or she must pay back the loan at a set amount.

Beverly N. Horner, the Salisbury State financial aid director said, "I think paying back loans based on your income is a good idea."

However, she expressed some concern about who would monitor the original program outlined in Clinton's campaign.

Horner said she did not anticipate any immediate action by the Clinton administration to overhaul the federal student aid system.

"No one [in the SSU financial aid office] has gotten hysterical over [the plan] yet," she said. "It has to go through a lot of steps first."

"In theory [Clinton's plan] sounds nice, but in reality it would be a nightmare to monitor."

She said that rather than completely wiping out the existing program, she feels it would be best to revamp the existing student aid program in incremental measures.

Horner said that the first change in the program should be making the interest on student loans tax deductible.

She estimated that 45 to 50 percent of Salisbury State students would be affected by any changes in the federal aid program, as approximately half of SSU students receive federal financial aid.

Job availability causes nationwide competitiveness

by John Williams, College Press Service

Despite an improving economy, college graduates face a mixed job market this spring. More job opportunities may be possible, but expectations for salaries are lower, according to a leading employment report.

"There is widespread anticipation that the new administration and Congress will put programs into place to stimulate the economy," said Victor Lindquist, associate dean and director of placement at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. He is the author of the 1993 Northwestern University Lindquist-Endicott Report.

The 47th annual survey of business and industrial firms nationwide found that corporate America is "relatively optimistic," but that the outlook for 1993 is only slightly better than 1992, the worst market for graduates in the past 20 years.

Most of the 258 businesses surveyed are cutting back on recruitment on college campuses and are reducing hiring in several disciplines, including most non-engineering graduates.

"Students will have to market themselves more effectively and have more flexibility," Lindquist said. "They must realize that their 'dream job' may be in another location or at a level less than desired."

Some other findings of the report include:

Students with degrees in computer science will find an 18 percent increase in job opportunities.

Demand for students with master's degrees will fall nearly 66 percent.

At the bachelor's level, 47 percent of the firms will need more personnel, but 42 percent will need fewer new employees. For students with master's degrees, 42 percent of the firms will hire more graduates, but 34 percent will hire fewer students.

A majority of the firms conduct drug tests and many check education and past employment references. Many firms are now using psychological testing.

Students with degrees in engineering can expect salaries .2 percent higher than 1992 graduates; liberal arts, 1.3 percent higher; and mathematics or statistics, 1 percent higher.

Patrick Scheetz, director of the Collegiate Employment Research Institute at Michigan State University in East Lansing, found in a national survey that employers are projecting a decrease in the hiring of college graduates for the fourth straight year.

The results were reported in Michigan State's 22nd annual national survey, which said the most serious problem facing campus recruiters is the limited number of minority and female job-seekers, and the need for more applicants with work experience. Graduate students also have unrealistic expectations, the report said.

Among the major findings: Employers are becoming more selective about their new hires, and some firms won't consider applicants with a grade point average less than 3.0.

Job availability, while competitive nationwide, is better in the Southeast and North Central, and more competitive in the Southwest, South Central, Northeast and Northwest.

The qualifications employers are looking for in college students include flexibility, teamwork skills and the ability to provide customer satisfaction. Computer knowledge is mandatory, the report said.

The estimated beginning salaries for 1993 college graduates range from $40,173 for chemical engineers to $19,114 for journalism majors. For students with master's degrees, the average is $35,289, and for Ph.D.'s $37,775.

SSU department heads speak out about appeal hours doing appendices for the program. Of the 355 general purpose institutions in the U.S. with more than 5,000 students, only two are without chemistry majors. We have talked with many people from the region trying to get support. All that we can think of we have done."

Kundell said that the chemistry department is growing very rapidly. "In preparing for fall scheduling we have had to deal with the increasing enrollment in the sciences. I just can't imagine killing the program right now."

The American Chemical Society, which accredits both the SSU and Towson State University chemistry departments, made a presentation to the Board of Regents on behalf of both schools. Kundell said, "We have a very good relationship with the chemistry department at TSU and we have been working with them closely [through the appeal process]."

Kundell said that SSU has strong arguments in favor of the program which the Board has ignored. He said the programs which are to be cut are, "key programs in our institutional mission."

When asked if he is optimistic about the future of the program Kundell said, "We have hopes, let's not say good hopes, but only time will tell."

"What [the Regents] are proposing doesn't make a whole lot of sense and I just hope that the alternative plan proposed by the administration can be accepted."

Like Kundell, Johanna Laird, the chair of the SSU medical technology department, has been extremely busy these past two months preparing various presentations and appeals to save the department.

Laird said, "The medical technology department has been as busy as it possibly could have been since December. The Board of Regents, MD legislators and other government officials have been inundated with calls and letters supporting the department."

"The legislators don't have direct control over the Board of Regents or Chancellor Langenberg, but are exerting subtle pressure over these people in our favor," she said.

Laird testified before a Maryland Senate committee hearing in support of the department. She said that she feels very positive about having support for the program.

In asking for this support Laird reached out to the Eastern Shore community and has been rewarded with a said that it is not practical solution.

According to the medical technology department's response to the Board's plan, "A survey of seven large area laboratories revealed that of 232 full-time equivalent positions, only one position was held by a UMAB graduate."

Laird also added that in the past decade only two UMAB graduates have worked at Peninsula General Hospital, one being Laird herself.

Laird said, "It is clear that we would be in an awful situation as an Eastern Shore health care community if we didn't have this program."

Laird said "Individually, I feel pretty good about the campuses, specifically Towson, UMBC and University of MD at College Park, all of which are more expensive than SSU."

This proposed elimination would also effectively eliminate the teacher education program in these fields, further aggravating a desperate shortage which already exists throughout the state of Maryland, said White.

White also noted the paradox of the situation, citing that in order to be accepted at a Maryland state college, a high school student must have taken at least two years of a foreign language. By eliminating teacher education programming these fields this is compromising the access in secondary schools to these programs.

White feels that even if SSU manages to fight the Board on this proposal the situation will not change. "The Regents will be back next year with more cuts."

Bellavance is appealing to the Board to retain the Spanish major. He will cite the increasing Hispanic population in the U.S., as well as other facts, as practical reasons for retaining the major. He is not planning to appeal the French major.

White said she was, "overwhelmed and touched by the student response in December with the rallies." She stressed that, "Students need to continue to be involved in the shaping of their education. If not, someone else will do it for them."

Edna Stillwell, SSU nursing department chair, said the struggle to retain autonomy for the SSU graduate nursing program, "Has been an uphill battle."

According to Stillwell, the situation with graduate nursing is different than that of the other departments. Rather than totally eliminate the SSU program, the plan demands centralization of all graduate nursing programs within the University of MD system at UMAB.

Stillwell said, "To have a graduate nursing program where the authority is vested 120 miles away is not the way to go. We think the approach should be regional."

Stillwell said that there exists, "No need to change a program which is growing, changing and meeting the needs of the community."

She also commented that a regional type of involvement would better serve the community, especially from a well established university with traditional ties to the community.

One defense Stillwell offers for the program is that, "It enriches the undergraduate program to have a graduate program right here on campus."

Stillwell said that SSU delegates are meeting weekly in Baltimore to negotiate the future of the program.

Phillip Bosserman, chair of the sociology department, said that he could not comment extensively on the situation because it continues to change daily.

Bosserman described the situation with the sociology department as "strange." The department is currently seeking an appeal with Bellavance to keep sociology at SSU without joining the department with UMES.

Bosserman said, "We would like to save the major as a stand-alone major here at SSU."

Currently, Bellavance is trying to save the major as a joint program with UMES. Bosserman said that further details will be available as time grows closer to the March 1 appeal.

The teacher education program at SSU was also affected by the plan. The plan called for SSU and UMES to "Review all programs leading to teacher certification and develop a proposal to offer a consolidated teacher education program."

A spokesperson from the education department could not be reached for comment.

entire University of Maryland system. Describing the problem of increased bureaucracy Bellavance said, "We say we want regional consolidation... When you start putting services way away from you, I can only see foggy bottom."

According to Bellavance, response from the Board of Regents to the SSU alternative plan has been anticipatory "They're looking forward to [seeing] what it's exactly going to be."

On Friday Feb. 5, 75 businesses met in support of the SSU alternative package. The meeting was also attended by Governor Schaefer. "It was a very impressive show for the Governor," said Bellavance.

Concern has been voiced over whether the alternative package will meet the primary criterion for saving money outlined by the Board of Regents.

"The whole money thing is very disturbing because the amount of money suggested in the plan, if the chemistry, sociology, medical technology, French and Spanish program were cut, couldn't match what they suggest," said Bellavance.

"We did a conservative study - that is we gave them the benefit of the doubt - and the best we could come up with was $280,000 [saved] over the long term. They suggest $700,000."

Bellavance added that the universities within the University of Maryland system will begin their appeals.

University presidents will represent the feelings of his or her campus, and individual departments will provide documents that will comprise appendices to the university four enhancements--the flagship campus at College Park, the historically black institutions, Baltimore-area research and graduate/professional education, and undergraduate education; faculty salary increments; facilities construction and renewal; and telecommunications infrastructure.

The plan's chief recommendations are to reconfigure or discontinue some 100 academic programs statewide, and to consolidate selected administrative services at regional centers. It also calls for a systemwide review of research activities."

Langenberg encourages student participation in this decision making process. For a copy of the plan devised by the Regents, call System Administration in Delphi, MD, at (301) 853-3740.

"All January we did nothing but work on this project."

-Thomas Bellavance, SSU president

Regents fails to consider that programs cut translate into a loss of students (i.e. revenue) and when and if those students are replaced, we will need to hire teachers to teach them. "Where's the savings?" asked Bellavance.

Bellavance said that a lot of university presidents are concerned with where the money is going. The money will remain in the budget and according to the Board of Regents the money will be redistributed to meet its priorities. Bellavance said, "The real question lies within these priorities. What are the priorities?"

On March 1 the hearings start and the colleges and plan.

As Chancellor of the Board of Regents, Donald Langenberg, said in his report, A Message from the Chancellor, "Each institution has been asked to document, by March 1, recommended actions that are believed not in the best interests of the citizens of Maryland."

Langenberg said, "Keep in mind that the short-term solutions have already been exhausted, and to preserve quality offerings statewide we are forced to turn to the long-term solutions offered in the new plan."

Langenberg cited several priorities encompassed within the plan. These include "The returned shortly," he said.

One program that will be started this semester may appease some of the students who dislike the new system.

A movie channel will be set up and aired on one of the

Morris said, "We have contracted 75 tapes to be shown during the spring semester on one blank channel."

Since the movie channel will be controlled by Salisbury,

Morris said that SSU will also be able to broadcast Communication Arts projects and other campus related videos during the times when no movies are being played.

According to Carol Williamson, dean of students, there will be a student panel set up. The movie channel is a cooperative effort with UMES and the SSU students will attend a meeting to decide which movies will be aired and when.

E DITORIAL

A Tale of Broken Dishes

There is no laughter in Salisbury tonight. No Jerry Seinfeld, no David Letterman, no Cheers. NBC is history, and no one is sure when and if it will return.

Maybe there is an explanation. Maybe Saturday Night Live did a parody of Frank Perdue and The Powerful One decided we weren't going to watch it at His university.

The satellite dish system will save "us" $20,000. Was your tuition bill any lower? Mine was higher. No student will ever see any of these savings. Just like we won't see any of the savings from the budget cuts.

I guess in order to save more money, the school hired a couple of fellas with big shoes and rubber noses to install the system. Helpful hint guys: the red wire matches with the other red wire.

So far, they've had eight weeks to install the dishes and fix all problems. Eight weeks is a pretty long time. Some civilizations can build a city in eight weeks. I hope the school isn't paying anyone by the hour, or else "our savings" are gone.

If we can pull in a FOX station from Chicago or Hollywood, why can't we do the same with NBC? I'm not fussy, I'd even watch the affiliate from Salt Lake City, as long as it's NBC.

Washington is about 90 miles from here. Yet we cannot "find" the signal with our dishes. However, my parents' $20 Radio Shack antenna can pick up stations from 100 miles away. All four networks, too. Wow! Perhaps we need something a little less technical and a little more functional.

I love the excuse that UMES is having the same problem. Well, if they can't solve it, it must be one of the seven wonders of the modern world. Ranks right up there with Bigfoot and the Crop Circles in England.

Most of the time, when one buys a satellite dish, one can receive more stations. SSU has once again proven there is an exception to every rule.

Townshend sheds new light on Emily Dickinson

by Kate Turner-Walker, staff writer

Lee Townshend is a remarkable actress. In The Belle of Amherst, the play that ran last weekend in the Fulton Hall theatre, Townshend took a potentially mediocre show and made it positively riveting. Townshend, the Director of Academic Services at the Perdue School of Business, has been working with director Paul Pfeiffer since December to make the one woman show about Emily Dickinson come to life.

The first act chronicled Dickinson's early life, her love of poetry, and her efforts to have her poems published.

The second act revealed the last part of Dickinson's life. It was then that the deaths of her father, mother, and nephew affected not only the amount of poems she wrote, but the topics she wrote about.

Dickinson, who is typically thought of as being a recluse because she never married and always wore bridal white, was shown instead to be a charming eccentric with unfailing determination and wit.

Townshend's delightful portrayal of Dickinson was accented by the lovely nineteenth century living room set and subtle, constant changes with lighting.

The audience was the only problem with Friday's performance. Several people were audibly snoring and the man sitting directly behind me was a compulsive paper crumpler.

Townshend's talent was most tested in the middle of the second act, a crucial point of the play. An older woman started to shout "I don't know what's happening to me. . . I think I'm fainting" over and over again.

She was carried out of the theatre by her husband and another man from the audience, providing an unfortunate distraction from Townshend's performance.

The show must go on, though, and Townshend seemed convincingly oblivious to what was going on around her.

It further attests to Townshend's portrayal of Dickinson that despite these distractions, despite the portion of the audience who was not at all interested in what was going on, she was greeted with constant and warm applause at the end of the play.

"Exposure" draws large crowds at the Flying Club

by Benn Ray, staff writer

With the rising popularity in Slam Poetry (performance poetry usually set in bars) in cities across the United States comes the Flying Club's new Exposure night.

This happens every Tuesday night starting at 9:00 p.m. and it costs absolutely nothing.

"Exposure" is the brainchild of the Flying Club's entertainment director Mick Haensler. Haensler said he decided to try it after the huge turnout at last semester's Evening with Rita (an off campus poetry reading at Whiskers and Wife which featured over 20 local writers and brought a crowd of over 175 people).

Evidently Haensler feels that there is an audience for such an endeavor.

And he is correct. This past Tuesday's opening night brought in a crowd of 30 people which was surprising for the lack of advertising. According to Haensler, this was the best Tuesday night the Flying Club has had in quite some time.

Exposure is a sort of open mic night. The structure is fairly loose: anyone with something original to perform is welcome to give it a try.

Although this past Tuesday

featured only poets, the mic is also available to anyone with an acoustic guitar, comedy routine, or kitties to juggle. The only requirement is that it is original. To be involved, all you have to do is show up.

Tuesday's performance was very entertaining. John Venable and Michael Skinner were highlights of the evening. Venable gained cheers with abrasive retorts to hecklers in the audience while Skinner was well received with his unique performance approach which is both captivating and humorous at the same time.

This is definitely not a night of stuffy academic-style poetry with stale poets in stale tweed jackets.

In between the sets of reading acoustic and folk music is played in a sincere attempt to give the disco-rama dance area atmosphere of the Flying Club a warm cafe feel.

They also serve gourmet coffees and espresso for one dollar a pop. The drink special (always a major element in deciding what bar to go to) is 2 for 1 imports and dollar drafts. Also, there is no cover charge. It is free entertainment at its best.

This Exposure night is not the stereotypical poetry/folk beatnik thing whose image lurks in the corner of our subconscious and spring out every time someone says "poetry reading" or "folk music."

This event is more like a 90's attempt at performance art which comes across like a machine-gun comedy routine. The upcoming weeks promise more diversity with talk around the bar of local zookeeper Jim

Rapp juggling flaming owl skulls and an a cappella punk rock duet of "Islands in the Stream."

So, any interested, all are welcome. Those of you who say "poetry, I'd rather be epiladied," you better get ready because they are even having Slam Poetry in bars in Baltimore and DC.

Just look at that jeans commercial with the guy reading poetry. It's all around (there's even talk of MTV doing a poetry segment), so you better get ready.

Poetry looks as though it's going to be the next big fad and the Flying Club is riding the cutting edge with Exposure.

Reservoir Dogs reflects understanding of brutality

by John Venable, staff writer

Quentin Tarantino's Reservoir Dogs is the first movie that:

A) offers a definitive interpretation of Madonna's "Like A Virgin."

B) provides a persuasive argument against tipping waitresses.

C) puts a whole new twist on the euphemism "police brutality."

D) uses the amount of time it takes for a man to bleed to death as a chronological framing device."

E) proves conclusively that whoever coined the phrase "no honor among thieves" was undoubtedly a master thief himself.

We're dealing with an extraordinary work of art here.

Those of you who think contemporary Americans have become too desensitized to do screen violence (wham, bam, thanks Van Damme) are in for a pleasant surprise with Reservoir Dogs.

The story revolves around Joe Cabot (Lawrence Tierney), his son, Nice Guy Eddie (Chris Penn) and the six criminals they bring together to pull off a risky, mid-day diamond heist in Southern California.

Mr. Blonde (Michael Madsen) is a sadistic psychopath. Mr. White (Harvey Keitel) is a careless but compassionate veteran but it doesn't matter; this knowledge heightens the irony and twisted comic vision of the movie.

Keitel and Madsen light up screen in caper flick

I will tell you this: rooting for your favorite gang member is kind of pointless, because everyone ends up dead. But not before Mr. Blonde gets to perform some pretty gruesome surgical techniques on a policeman he takes hostage.

It's a perfect revenge fantasy for anyone who has ever been hassled at a Smith Street party. It's a long scene, very graphic, and far more disturbing than, say, Ice-T's "Cop Killer."

Most critics are yammering away over how Tarantino owes large debts to Scorsese's Mean Streets for his colorful use of language, character and location and Kubrick's The Killing for narrative structure.

That's all well and academic, but Reservoir Dogs's true antecedent lies in the gratuitous, existential violence of Sam Peckinpah, circa Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia (a sight more daring an influence these days).

There's a scene in that movie in which the hero, played by the inimitable Warren Oates, pumps a round into an obviously dead body, then snarls, "Why? Because it feels so goddamn good!"

Tarantino, in his debut, understands this philosophy of brutality, and its darkly comic implications, inside and out.

Screw the thumbs up, Mr. Blonde would just lop 'em off anyway. Reservoir Dogs gets a Hail Mary.

Chirpy The Bird

Once upon a time, in a quite suburb, lived a cute, little sparrow named Chirpy. Her eggs had hatched and she spent her days caring for her hungry chicks. She loved to gather food for her young and sail effortlessly through the air on warm spring breezes. She was so very free and happy.

Then one day, she flew directly into a sliding glass door, snapped her neck and died instantly. Her helpless chicks were eaten by a cat.

The End.

Wolfe hits clutch free throws to lead Gulls

By Mary Yankosky, staff writer

Pressure! SSU junior point guard Tom Wolfe seems to know just how to handle it.

Wolfe netted two free throws in the final seconds of Saturday's game to pace the Sea Gulls to an 85-82 win over visiting Allentown.

The win increases SSU's record to 14-7 overall and 6-1 in the Eastern States Athletic Conference, while the Centaurs fall to 9-11 overall and 1-4 in ESAC competition.

With the score knotted at 81-81 and only 23 seconds left in the game, Allentown's Kevin Ward committed his fourth foul sending Wolfe to the charity stripe. Wolfe converted both shots, giving SSU an 83-81 advantage.

"I just tried to block everything out," said Wolfe. "I didn't look at the clock. I expected them to ice me, they didn't. I didn't want to choke, so I didn't let the whole situation get to me."

Kyle Jefferson goes to the bucket while Derek Holmes (20) and Kevin Wards (50) defend.

"They (Wolfe's shot) were really big. That gave us a two point lead. We left him out there because he is one of our better foul shooters of our point guards," head basketball coach Ward Lambert said.

The Gulls called a quick timeout after Wolfe sank the free throws.

Lindenstruth scores 19, Gulls still fall short by Chris Kirk, staff writer

On Saturday night the Salisbury State University women's basketball team fell 79-74 to the visiting Allentown Centaurs despite holding a 10 point lead at halftime.

SSU drops to 9-10 overall and to 2-5 in the Eastern States Athletic Conference, while Allentown upped its record to 9-11 overall, and 3-2 in the ESAC.

The Gulls offensive attack was balanced, as four players scored in double figures.

Gail Lindenstruth led SSU with 19 points as she excelled from the foul line where she made six of seven foul shots.

Kim Roth scored 15 points for the Gulls and pulled down 20 rebounds, four rebounds short of her personal best.

Amy Fenzel scored 12 points, and assisted SSU in its 58-43 rebounding advantage, grabbing 13 rebounds.

Shavella Watkins scored 10 points for the Gulls, shooting 60 percent from the field.

Thus the number 42 will join those of Cottle and Stem in the showcase outside of the arena never to be worn again.

Lide made introductions of the people standing at center court awaiting the announcement of Andre Foreman.

"We recognize his mother Betty Sawyer, and his three friends, that shared a lifetime of memories with Andre and with us," Lide said. "Jeff Barnes, Pat Williams and Jamie Gosweiler and his coach, Ward Lambert."

"I wanted them (Barnes, Williams and Gosweiler) to be a part of this day," Foreman said after the ceremony. "That is why I brought the team out here."

In a homecoming of sorts, 21 former men's basketball players returned to Maggs Gym on Feb. 13, 1993 to participate in the Alumni basketball game. The contest featured athletes who played under head coach Ward Lambert, dating as far back as 1974 and as recently as 1992. The men were broken into "young" and "old" teams, according to their graduation dates. In a hard fought battle, the "young" team outgunned the "old" team 104-84. See page 16 for box score.

Kim Roth leaps to division III national ranking

by Kevin Bradford, staff writer

Off the court, she is soft-spoken and shy, however, when Kim Roth steps on the hardwood, she is a totally different person.

How different?

The 6-0 sophomore center, calm and quiet in nature in her spare time, has developed into a rebounding machine for the Salisbury State University women's basketball team.

The Leesport, PA native has put up monster numbers on the boards this season for the 9-9 overall (and 2-4 in the ESAC) Sea Gulls.

Roth is currently the second ranked rebounder in division III basketball, averaging 15.2 rebounds a game.

Giovanni Licorish of Baruch College (NY) leads the nation in rebounds with 16.3 rebounds per game.

Despite turning in many outstanding performances this season, rebounding is nothing new to Roth, who just grabbed her 500th career rebound in a recent game against Wilmington College (Delaware).

"I've always been a pretty good rebounder, even in high school," said Roth. She averaged 17 points and 17 rebounds during her high school career at Schuylkill Valley.

When asked about her recent accomplishments, such as being one of the nation's best rebounders and collecting 500 plus rebounds in only two seasons at SSU she said, "I was shocked. I wasn't expecting any of this."

Roth is no new face among the national leaders in rebounding. She averaged 12.8 rebounds a game last season as a freshman for the Gulls and she pulled down the most rebounds ever in a season by a freshman (307). Those caroms alone were the third highest single-season total by a Sea Gull.

Not only can Roth snag missed shots, she can also score her fair share of points. She was probably SSU's most consistent player last season.

Roth averaged 8.0 points and 12.8 rebounds per contest.

Marking her consistency over her two-year career so far at SSU, Roth has reached double-figure rebounding in 24 of 42 career games.

She has also topped the double-figure scoring mark in 23 of those 42 games.

Roth turned in her best rebounding performance in a heartbreaking 66-65 loss to Shenandoah in overtime, as she grabbed 24. She had 22 in the Notre Dame (MD) tournament.

She has also had a chance to elevate her offensive game as many players had to step up and fill the voids left by two players in January due to ineligibility.

She is averaging 13.6 points and 15.2 rebounds a game.

Roth not only likes to rebound, but she also enjoys the passing part of the game. Not typical of a post-player, Roth is a surprisingly good passer from her center position.

"I'd rather have someone else shoot if they have a better shot," Roth said.

Last season SSU was 9-15 overall (5-4 in ESAC) in the Eastern States Athletic Conference, however this season the Gulls soared to 5-1 early in the season, and even after slowing down a bit, Roth says playing at SSU is playing more like a team this year.

"It's totally different from high school. The team is more of a family," she said.

When all is said and done and Roth takes to the floor for competition she wants to "just go out and have a good game".

Her aggressive and physical nature on the glass as well as in the middle complement her ability to rebound, which in fact allow her to "just go out and have a good game."

Foreman goes down in SSU history, as jersey is retired

By Mary Yankosky, staff writer

Another page in the Salisbury State University history books has been written. On February 13, 1992, as 921 fans looked on, SSU president, Thomas Bellavance, along with Dr. William Lide, director of athletics, officially retired the jersey of two-time all-American, Andre Foreman at halftime of the men's games against Allentown College.

"This is an extra special occasion, and it is to do one major chore, a fun chore. It is the retirement of the number of Andre Foreman," Dr. Lide said in his opening remarks.

Foreman joins the elite ranks of David Cottle (men's lacrosse) and Stacey Stem (field hockey), the only other athletes in the history of the university to have their jerseys retired.

Springmann earns first career win

On Jan. 5th former Salisbury State University men's basketball player and assistant coach, Russell Springmann, recorded his first career victory as head coach. As the Mardela Warrior's downed St. Michael's 57-37.

Cycling club takes winter trip to Florida

The Salisbury State University Cycling Club toured many cities in Florida on their "Tour de Florida," which took place over the winter term. They stopped at numerous restaurants and tourist attractions along the way. Some of the members even got to swim with endangered manatees. In between their sight seeing and the frequent rain storms the club did get some cycling in. Some days some members biked over 70 miles.

Men sneak by Centaurs; record impressive 10-2 winter term mark

Following the TO, the Centaurs took the ball down court and threw it away as Anthony Southerland's shot was off.

Southerland fouled Kevin Cromer who hit one of two free throws with 8.4 seconds left to play, extending the SSU lead to three, 84-81, however, the Centaurs still had time to regroup and try to tie the game.

But with 3.1 ticks left on the clock, Wolfe fouled Southerland, who went to the line to shoot two.

By fouling, Wolfe virtually eliminated the possibility of an Allentown three point field goal and the threat of a possible overtime situation.

Southerland made the first and missed the second one. Salisbury's Kyle Jefferson pulled down the missed shot securing the win for the Sea Gulls.

"We told him to foul, because I've seen it to many times when they (the opposing team) bury the three, we took the chance and Kyle (Jefferson) had a nice rebound," Lambert said.

"I've seen the scenario where you don't foul and the guy dribbles down and shoots the three and the game goes into to overtime and you lose," Wolfe said. "All we had to do was get the rebound."

It looked as if the Sea Gulls weren't going to have any trouble at all putting the Centaurs away, as they raced to an 18-1 lead early in the first half, and took a 12 point lead into the locker room, 51-39.

But in the second half, the Sea Gulls watched as their 12 point half time lead began to slowly dwindle.

Allentown narrowed the lead to as few as nine points early in the half, and finally tied the game for the first time with 8:02 left in the game.

"Well, we obviously overlooked them and thought we had the game won," Lambert said.

Dameon Ross, Kevin Cromer and Ed Farrell all reached double figures for the Sea Gulls. Ross had 23 points, followed by Cromer and Farrell with 14 point each.

Jefferson had nine points for the winners, and Wolfe and Bret Grebowsky chipped in eight and six points respectively.

Cromer led all SSU rebounders with eight. Wolfe had a game-high five assists.

Ted Gladue was the leading scorer for Allentown with 28 points. Southerland had 17 and Mike Kearney tallied 11.

"We tried to stop him (Gladue) and did not do a good job. In the second half we didn't seem to know where he was," Lambert said.

SSU 104, N.C. WES.95 (Marymount Tourney)

Jan.10--Salisbury State avenged a 109-102 loss to North Carolina Wesleyan, in the final game of the Marymount Tournament, posting a 104-95 win.

Dameon Ross, who was named MVP of the tournament, led Gulls offensive attack with 37 points. Kevin Cromer and Eddie Farrell each collected 17 points while Bret Grebowsky chipped in 12.

Leo McLaughlin had a game-high four assists and four steals for Salisbury.

James Condery had 29 points for N.C. Wesleyan, while Richard Blands added 20 points.

SSU 91, WASH. 66

Jan. 14--Dameon Ross, Kevin Cromer, Leo McLaughlin, and Kyle Jefferson each reached double figures to pace the the Sea Gulls to a 91-66 win over the visiting Shoremen of Washington College.

Ross had 31 points, while Cromer tallied 21, McLaughlin had 11 and Jefferson ten.

Geoff Ruppert led the way for Washington College with 12 points, while Charles Cummings had 11.

SSU 96, FROSTBURG 75

Jan. 16--SSU continued its winning ways against visiting cross-state rival, Frostburg, handing the Bobcats a 96-75 loss.

Dameon Ross, Bret Grebowsky and Ed Farrell led the way for the Sea Gulls with 26, 20 and 16 points respectively.

Kyle Jefferson led all Salisbury rebounders with nine.

Todd Mallery was high-scorer for Frostburg with 17 points, Donny Woodard followed with 15 and Jason Simms had 10.

SSU 111, SHEN.99

Jan.17--Dameon Ross and Kevin Cromer each scored 32 points to engineer the Sea Gulls to a 111-99 home win over Shenandoah.

Kyle Jefferson had a season-best 28 points and 12 rebounds.

Bret Grebowsky and Tom Wolfe had six and five assists respectively.

Don Turpin led the way for the Horents with 33 points and Phil Dixon added 18.

SSU 105, CATHOLIC 87

Jan.19-- Catholic University's trip to Maggs Gym, was not very successful, as Salisbury

State handily defeated them 105-87.

Dameon Ross, Kyle Jefferson, Kevin Cromer and Bret Grebowsky led the way for the Sea Gulls.

Ross tallied 36 points while Jefferson had 19, Cromer and Grebowsky added 17 and 15 respectively.

Cromer pulled down 16 rebounds for the winners, while Ross distributed eight assists. Jon Evans had five assists.

Michael Connelly had 26 points for Catholic while Chris Conefry had 22.

SSU 104, ALLEN. 86

Jan. 23--When the Sea Gulls travelled to Center Valley, PA to take on the Centaurs of Allentown they cruised to a 104-86 win.

Dameon Ross and Kevin Cromer supplied Salisbury with 30 and 17 points.

Ed Farrell, Kyle Jefferson and Bret Grebowsky followed with 16, 14 and 13 points respectively.

Tom Wolfe had a game-high 10 steals and five assists for the Gulls, while Farrell led the team in rebounds with six.

Anthony Southerland and Kevin Ward each scored 15 points for Allentown. Ed Kearney and Ted Gladue added 13 and 12 points.

SSU 123, WESLEY 76

Jan. 27--The Sea Gulls rolled to a convincing 123-76 win over visiting Wesley College.

Dameon Ross turned in another 30 point performance to lead SSU to the win.

Other players scoring in double figures were, Kevin Cromer with 22 points, Bret Grebowsky with 19, Tom Wolfe and Ed Farrell with 10.

Cromer had 12 rebounds for the winners while Wolfe collected six assists and five steals.

Tom Dickinson led all Wesley scorers with 19.

SSU 101, LINCOLN 79

Feb. 3--SSU downed Lincoln University 101-79 at home, behind 28 points from Dameon Ross.

Kevin Cromer and Bret Grebowsky each had 15 points. Ed Farrell added 12 points.

Cromer and Ross pulled down 10 and 12 rebounds respectively.

Mike Tyson led the way for Lincoln with 29 points.

Dameon Ross led all SSU scorers with 31 points. Kevin Cromer had 21, while Tom Wolfe tallied 18 followed by Aaron Wood with 16.

Don Turpin had 32 points for the Hornets.

FROSTBURG 85, SSU 82

Feb.6--Despite a late game rally, the men's basketball team still came up four points short of a victory at Frostburg.

The Bobcats posted an 85-82 win, snapping the Sea Gulls 25-game win streak in the Eastern States Athletic Conference.

FSU upped its record to 12-9 overall and 3-3 in the conference, while the Sea Gulls dropped to 12-7 and 4-1 in the ESAC.

"This is just a great win for us," Frostburg head coach Oscar Lewis said. "When you beat a team like Salisbury State it is a big win. We shot exceptionally well. We hit the three point shots, which was a difference in the game for us."

A layup by FSU's Kelvin Clayton allowed the Bobcats to take a ten point lead, 66-56, with less than ten minutes left in the game.

The Sea Gulls made one last surge, with an 8-2 spurt, cutting the FSU lead to four, 68-64, however, it was not enough.

Leading 83-82 with 43 seconds left on the clock, FSU spread the floor and went to its delay game and slowed the tempo.

Todd Mallery sealed the win for Frostburg with two free throws.

Dameon Ross led all SSU scorers with 22 points, followed by Ed Farrell with 18 and Tom Wolfe with 13. Kevin Cromer added 10 points.

Donny Woodard scored a game-high 36 points to ignite the Bobcats to victory. Kevin Murphy and Kelvin Clayton had 13 and 12 points respectively.

Jason Simms dished out 13 assists for the winners, while Clayton pulled down 15 rebounds.

SSU 121, SHEN.116

Feb. 7-- The Sea Gulls rebounded from their loss to Frostburg, downing host Shenandoah 121-116.

Women fall short of victory; compile 3-7 slate during winter term

Even though the Gulls offense was effective they could have been much more effective if it wasn't for their 36 turnovers, twice as many as Allentown's 18.

The Centaurs were led by Mary Ellen DePiero, who scored 24 points in the victory.

DePiero was accurate both from the field (9-16) and from the foul line (6-6). DePiero had two steals on the defensive side of the ball.

Leading Allentown on the boards was Michele Stabley with 11 rebounds, and she also chipped in 15 points.

SSU had defeated Allentown during winter break 75-73 in Allentown, so the teams split the season series.

Over the winter term the women's team played 11 games, many of the games were against conference opponents and went 3-8 (2-4 in the ESAC).

SSU 75, Allentown 73

Jan. 23-- SSU recorded their first win of the winter term as four players scored in double figures.

Jen Boone led the team with 17, while Kim Roth, Amy Fenzel, and Nicole Urban scored 15, 14, and 13 points respectively.

Roth pulled down 18 rebounds for the Gulls.

Allentown was led by Karen Trojanowski and Michele Stabley who scored 17 and 15 points respectively.

Stabley led Allentown with eight rebounds.

SSU 95, Lincoln 39

Feb. 3-- SSU romped over Lincoln as five players reached double figures.

Kim Roth led the team with 23 points. Jen Boone and Amy Fenzel had 18 and 13 points respectively, while both Jennifer O'Neill and Gini McDowell recorded 11 points.

Roth led the team with 10 rebounds.

Lincoln was led by Melinda Thomas with 18 points. Naneka Brathwaite led the team with 11 rebounds.

Frostburg State 93, SSU 65

Feb. 6-- Salisbury State lost to rival Frostburg State for the second time this season.

Jen Boone and Amy Fenzel led the way for the Seagulls, scoring 18 points a piece. Gini McDowell and Kim Roth both reached double figures, scoring 10 points each.

Roth led SSU with 19 rebounds.

Frostburg finished with three players scoring 16 points: Heidi VonColln, Katrina Powell, and Nicole Bashaw.

Leading FSU on the boards was Bashaw with 13 rebounds.

Wilmington 105, SSU 63

Jan. 25-- Jen Boone, who was the only SSU player to reach double figures led the Gulls with 13 points.

Kim Roth led Salisbury with 12 rebounds.

Wilmington's offensive attack had six players score in double figures. Jenny Asbury led the team with 20 points.

Missy Burns led the way with 14 rebounds, while Cherie Jarmon and Patty Tannon added 13 rebounds each.

SSU 93, Notre Dame 77

Jan. 28-- Amy Fenzel and Kim Roth scored 21 and 20 points respectively to lead the Gulls. Jen O'Neill contributed 16.

Gini McDowell and Kim Roth pulled down 10 rebounds to lead SSU.

Notre Dame was led by Toyah Houck who scored 23 points and had 7 rebounds.

called Foreman to mid-court and imbelished on all of Foreman's accomplishments while at Salisbury State.

He spoke of the many honors Foreman has received both on the local and national levels.

"The retiring of a jersey is the greatest conceivable honor a team can offer one of it's players and it is rarely done," Dr. Bellavance said.

Before concluding, Dr. Bellavance asked Foreman, "Do you want to hold it (the jersey) and feel it for one last time? It is going into the trophy case. And obviously it will never be used again in respect to you."

"I'm happy, I feel honored," Foreman said after his jersey had been officially retired.

Editor's note: Andre Foreman will be leaving for Australia in a few weeks to continue his basketball career. He originally signed to play with the Greenville (SC) Spinners, a member of the Global Basketball Association which folded.

Phi Mu

We hope everyone had a good break. First, congratulations are sent out to our four new sisters that were initiated on December 12. They are Stephanie Flanders, Mary Hesselberg, Jennifer Parker and Elicia Teague. We also want to say congratulations to our new officers for 1993. Good Luck! We know you guys will do a great job!! The sisters are also gearing up for rush which starts on Feb. 22. Anyone interested in joining AST, Phi Mu, or ZTA should be sure to sign up for rush registration.

BRIEFLY STATED FORMS CAN BE PICKED UP ON THE DOOR OF THE FLYER OFFICE, 2ND FLOOR UNIVERSITY CENTER. THEY ARE DUE WED. 5 P.M.

HEY SSU

DID YOU KNOW THAT KINKO'S CAN:

- ☐ BIND all of your important papers. We offer spiral or velo binding with your choice of covers.
- ☐ Make COLOR COPIES of your favorite photo or artwork. Yes, we can enlarge and reduce them also.
- ☐ Design a CUSTOM RESUME to help you find that special job. We are Salisbury's leading resumé service.
- ☐ And of course we offer a complete copying service, faxing, desktop publishing, stationary supplies, and hourly Macintosh computer or typewriter rentals.
